

CHARITABLE GIVING AND THE IRS

by Jose A. Feliciano, CFP™ President, Feliciano Financial Group

As we approach the fun-filled holiday season in the 4th quarter of the year, most of us have a good idea of what our taxable income will be for 2022. If you're wondering whether you can do anything now to save taxes on April 15, the answer is very likely yes. Depending on your facts and circumstances, the following ideas could help reduce your 2022 income tax bill.

Charitable giving can play an important role in many estate plans. Philanthropy can not only give you great personal satisfaction, it can also give you a current income tax deduction, let you avoid capital gains tax, and reduce the amount of taxes your estate may owe when you die. There are many ways to give to charity. You can make gifts during your lifetime or at your death. You can make gifts outright or use a trust. You can name a charity as a beneficiary in your will, or designate a charity as a beneficiary of your retirement plan or life insurance policy. Or, if your gift is substantial, you can establish a private foundation, community foundation, or donor-advised fund.

MAKING OUTRIGHT GIFTS

An outright gift is one that benefits the charity immediately and exclusively. With an outright gift you get an immediate income and gift tax deduction. Tip: Make sure the charity is a qualified charity according to the IRS. Get a written receipt or keep a bank record for any cash donations, and get a written receipt for any property other than money.

WILL OR TRUST BEQUESTS AND BENEFICIARY DESIGNATIONS

These gifts are made by including a provision in your will or trust document, or by using a beneficiary designation form. The charity receives the gift at your death, at which time your estate can take the income and estate tax deductions.

CHARITABLE TRUSTS

Another way for you to make charitable gifts is to create a charitable trust. You can name the charity as the sole beneficiary, or you can name a non-charitable beneficiary as well, splitting the beneficial interest (this is referred to as making a partial charitable gift). The most common types of trusts used to make partial gifts to charity are the charitable lead trust and the charitable remainder trust.

CHARITABLE LEAD TRUST

A charitable lead trust pays income to a charity for a certain period of years, and then the trust principal passes back to you, your family members, or other heirs. The trust is known as a charitable lead trust because the charity gets the first, or lead, interest. A charitable lead trust can be an excellent estate planning vehicle if you own assets that you expect will substantially appreciate in value. If created properly, a charitable lead trust allows you to keep an asset in the family and still enjoy some tax benefits.

CHARITABLE REMAINDER TRUST

A charitable remainder trust is the mirror image of the charitable lead trust. Trust income is payable to you, your family members, or other heirs for a period of years, then the principal goes to your favorite charity. A charitable remainder trust can be beneficial because it provides you with a stream of current income—a desirable feature if there won't be enough income from other sources.

PRIVATE FAMILY FOUNDATION

A private family foundation is a separate legal entity that can endure for many generations after your death. You create the foundation, then transfer assets to the foundation, which in turn makes grants to public charities. You and your descendants have complete control over which charities receive grants. But, unless you can contribute enough capital to generate funds for grants, the costs and complexities of a private foundation may not be worth it.

With the upcoming holiday season upon us, we tend to focus our attention on charitable giving. Even though our primary motivation is philanthropic and to help a favorite charity continue their good works, it doesn't mean we shouldn't take advantage of the great tax benefits available to those who give.
